unreasonably to cast on researches of this kind, notwithstanding they are the only solid and rational means whereby we may ever hope to make any real advance in the knowledge of Nature: A knowledge worthy the attainment of Princes.

And as Solomon, the greatest and wisest of men, disdained not to inquire into the nature of Plants, from the Cedar in Lebanon, to the Hyssop that springeth out of the wall: So it will not, I presume, be an unacceptable entertainment to Your Royal Highness, at least at Your leisure hours; but will rather add to the pleasure, with which vegetable Nature in her prime verdurę charms us: To see the steps she takes in her productions, and the wonderful power she therein exerts: The admirable provision she has made for them, not only
